

5

10

Abstract of the Disclosure

15        Compute nodes in a high performance computer system are interconnected by an inter-node communication network. Each compute node has a network interface coupled directly to a CPU by a dedicated full-duplex packetized interconnect. Data may be exchanged between compute nodes using eager or rendezvous protocols. The network interfaces may include facilities to manage data transfer between computer nodes.